Alaska does not have a state-funded prekindergarten initiative, although the state has provided a supplement to federal Head Start programs since the 1980s. State funding through Alaska’s Head Start supplement is available to any federally recognized Head Start program in the state, and totaled more than $6 million during the 2006-2007 school year. These funds are targeted toward quality improvement through professional development and school readiness activities, and wherever possible, funds are used to serve additional children and families. In 2006-2007, approximately 500 additional children were served in both Early Head Start and Head Start settings.
